What is discrimination?

Under the fair housing laws, it is discrimination for a landlord, agent, seller, or bank to treat people differently depending on their religion. You cannot be refused an apartment or loan, held to different eligibility standards, or evicted because of your religion. It is illegal for a real estate agent not to show you properties in certain neighborhoods because of your religion.

How do the fair housing laws define religion?

The laws do not define religion. Presumably, landlords are not permitted to discriminate against any faith or belief system. However, it is possible that religious organization which advocate racial discrimination, such as the Ku Klux Klan, would not be protected by the fair housing laws. Certainly, landlords are not allowed to treated applicants differently because they lack any faith or organized religion.

Can a landlord or agent ask about an applicant's religion?

That is illegal. A landlord cannot impose his or her own religious beliefs on renters nor can the landlord treat applicants of his or her own faith differently from people of other faiths.

Some Examples of Discrimination:

"What church do you go to?"

"I feel more comfortable with other Jews."

"People who have no religion have no morals."

"Are you interested in joining the Church of Christ?"

"Are you religious?"

"You probably wouldn't like this neighborhood-It is very Catholic."

"I hold a prayer meeting every Sunday. Is that something you'd be interested in?"

"How do I know you'll be reliable if you don't believe in the word of God?"

"Don't sell your house to those Jehovah's Witnesses -they'll bring the neighborhood down."

Do the Fair Housing laws apply to all housing?

The laws against sex discrimination apply to all housing EXCEPT:

- ◆ A home in which the landlord resides and rents out only one room;
- ◆ Buildings operated by a religious organization for other than a commercial purpose, unless the religion is racially exclusive.
